By WHITNEY LEGGETT
CV&T News Editor

The Estill County Grand Jury returned indictments for 20 people last week including one for Daniel Patterson charging him with first degree robbery.

The grand jury charges that Patterson, 34, of Hope Estates, robbed the Cash Express on Richmond Road with a metal pipe. Patterson stole $2,919.56. First degree robbery is a Class B felony.

Patterson was also recently charged with second degree escape for escaping custody while being transported from Clark County Detention Center for an EPO hearing in Estill County.

Patterson allegedly picked the lock to his handcuffs, kicked off his shoes and fled toward Richmond in a stolen Dodge pick-up truck earlier this month.

He was arrested days later in Knox County outside the home of his parents Phyllis and Daniel Patterson, Sr. The case has been waived to the grand jury.

Clara Donahue, 69, of Walton Road, is charged with first degree wanton endangerment. According to the indictment, Donahue fired a gun 20-feet above an 11-year-old boy. First degree wanton endangerment is a Class D felony.

Gregory Morris, 44, of Pea Ridge Road, is charged with six counts including first degree cruelty to animals. The indictment states Morris was in possession of 70 Klonopin, marijuana and six hydrocodone pills when police searched his home. Police also found a scale and rolling papers.

Police were initially alerted because an anonymous caller reported there was dog fighting and potentially a dead dog at Morris' home. Police found several bloody and injured Pit Bulls and a dead chicken.

Morris is charged with third degree possession of a controlled substance, second degree possession of a controlled substance,

THE BUZZ OVER BEEKEEPING

BUDDY ROSS HAS BEEN CARING FOR BEES 'ALL HIS LIFE'

By LISA BICKNELL
CV&T Staff Writer

Most folks don't spend a lot of time thinking about how important the work of honeybees is to the food chain.

But George "Buddy" Ross knows this well.

"I've been taking care of bees all my life, ever since I was a kid," he said.

Buddy and his wife, Brenda, live on a scenic ridge at the top of Drip Rock Mountain near the Estill/Jackson County line. He bought the farm from his father who was a beekeeper too.

Across the road from the house, six hives of bees busy themselves in the apple orchard. They work and live in sets of stacked brood boxes painted white.

The trees overhead are laden with ripening fruit now, thanks in part to the bees. When the apple trees bloom, "the bees pollinate the trees," Buddy explains.

Not only do the bees benefit the trees, but "the bees work best in the shade."

No matter how hot it gets, when it comes time to "work" the bees, Buddy dresses in a "bee bonnet" and white jumpsuit, protective gear that keeps him from getting stung when he opens the hive. Occasionally a bee will work its way under his suit and sting him anyway.

When Buddy slowly lifts the lid to the top box on the hive and turns it over, the bottom of the lid is covered in clinging bees. None of them attack.

"These are pretty good here," Buddy

Smith said there was a "strong, pungent odor," in the basement of the home.

Smith and Gross searched the basement and, according to the uniform cita-

Irvine City Council approves readvertising for old city hall building

By WHITNEY LEGGETT
CV&T News Editor

The Irvine City Council agreed to re-advertise the old city hall building on Broadway at its meeting Monday night.

City Clerk Robin Sewell told council members she had just received word the former bidder had decided he was no longer interested in the property.

The building had previously been bid on and won by a local man who planned to open a Carquest in Irvine.

He told Councilman Billy Arthur he was forced to open the business in a different location because it was taking too long to close on the building. He had previously said he may still be interested in the property and at the beginning of the month Irvine Mayor Ernest Farmer told him he would give him two more weeks to decide.

The council had discussed at its July meeting what would be done if the bidder was no longer interested in the property.

Councilman Tim Burkhardt suggested trying different methods of advertising the property than had been used before.

"Putting a sign in the window is just not going to get it," Burkhardt said.

The council agreed to begin meeting with local real estate agents and ask if they would be interested in trying to sell the property.

Councilman Tobo Bryant stressed the importance of placing a time limit on the advertising. He said if the property doesn't sell before the first of the year, the council should look into the cost of demolition and using the site for another purpose.

"I think we're putting off the inevitable," he said. "I can't see anybody buying it."

Farmer said a January cut-off for advertising would be "more than enough time," to see if it sells and if not, look into other options.

Farmer told the council he would begin setting up meetings with local real estate agents to discuss the possibility of one of them advertising and trying to sell the property.

In other business:

•The council voted not to change the City of Irvine property tax rate.

•Farmer told the council the lights on the Irvine Bridge would be back on this week.

•Farmer told Councilwoman Janice Bush he would talk to officials at the health department about an alleged rat infestation in town.

•Irvine Division of Police Chief Brad Smith provided the council with a July activities report for the department and a record of ordinances being worked on.

•The council approved a privilege license for Dustin Stevenson to open a photography studio on Main Street.

Pickers Paradise wins Business of the Quarter award

said, “but if they get after you, just take off.”

“The key to working with bees is to move real gentle.”

He explains that sudden movements will stir up the bees and provoke an attack. “Sometimes when you open them up, they’ll come pouring out,” he said.

The aggressiveness of a hive often depends on the personality of the queen bee.

“Some are mean, some are good,” Buddy said.

Most of his hives are good.

The worker bees are named so because they stay busy feeding the queen. They also work tirelessly to keep the hive cool in summer and warm in winter.

While a queen bee can live five or six years, worker bees only live about six weeks in summer and six months in winter. In summer, they literally work themselves to an early death. Drones, whose main purpose is to mate with the queen, usually live about four months.

“There were just a handful of bees in here when I started this hive,” Buddy said. “I ordered a queen and put her in there. The workers gathered right around, because she’s the queen, you see.”

Buddy said the queen lays as many as 1,800 eggs a month. When the hive becomes too crowded, some of the bees will leave, or swarm, as they look for another home.

“You have to give them plenty of room. Like people, if you put them too close together, they’ll fly the coop.”

Whenever Buddy starts a new hive, he feeds the bees sugar water until they get established.

“You back off when they get started, and let them feed themselves.”

The worker bees are constantly in and out of the hive to feed on flower nectar, and in the process spread pollen from bloom to bloom, thus pollinating the fruit trees. It’s estimated that one-fourth of the pollination of all fruit produced in the United States is completed this way.

Buddy says he’s willing to come and get a swarm if anyone ever hears one.

“If a swarm goes over, get a wash pan or something and beat on it. The bees’ coordination fails and they’ll settle.”

Buddy Ross said the extreme temperatures this summer have forced to push off robbing his bees. He usually robs them for honey in July because “it runs better in the summer.”

They typically look for a hollow tree to house their hive.

“If the bees settle on a limb, you climb up and tie a rope on the limb. You cut the limb and let it down easy. You put a sheet down and set a gum, or brood box, down on top of that. Shake ‘em off the limb and they’ll go right in the box.”

Blue moths can be a problem if they infest a bee hive.

Ross says his job as a kid was to fish the “millers,” or moths, out of his dad’s hives every morning.

“I’d take an elder branch, split it and stick it back in the hive. The grubs would get in the pith. I’d fish them out every morning. That was my job.”

He says the hives can be chemically treated to kill the moths, but he knows of someone who did and killed 25 of their 40 hives.

Mites can infest the hives too.

“If your bees are out crawling around in the grass that means you have a diseased hive.”

Queen bees aren’t cheap if you have to buy them, Buddy says. “They are twenty-something dollars now, and three pounds of bees and a queen cost seventy-some dollars.”

Whenever Buddy “robs” the hives, he pulls the trays, or frames, out of the brood boxes, and opens the top of the honey up by raking through the waxy layer of comb that caps if off. The frames are then placed in an extractor, which slings the honey out by centrifugal force.

Buddy says the bees seem to be tamer when the owner spends more time around them.

“Some people talk to them,” he laughs.

Buddy mows the grass right next to his hives, but the bees don’t attack.

“They think that a bigger bee is a goin’ around,” he said.

The bees work all spring, summer and fall creating enough honey to get them through the winter. Their brood boxes become very heavy as they fill up.

“One time I had a bull that turned one of the hives over.”

Buddy said he and his son “liked to have never got that thing set back up. I’ll bet it weighed 200 pounds.”

He typically extracts the honey in July because, “Honey runs better in summer. It gets stiff in the fall.”

This summer’s extremely hot and dry weather has forced him to hold off on “robbing” the bees because production is down.

“It takes 60 pounds of honey to take the hive through the winter. You can’t rob too much, or they’ll starve to death,” Buddy said.

Buddy will be 82 in November. He was born in Owensboro, when his father worked in the oil fields there. When he was a baby, his family moved to the Brushy Mountain area, then finally to Drip Rock.

“Dad taught me to work. If it’s pretty outside, I’ve got to be out doing something,” he said.

Bees require a lot of time and attention, but Buddy says, “I just like to fool with them. Without bees we’d be a’ hurtin’!”

Covering school sports makes columnist nostalgic

I spent part of my Monday evening at the football field at Estill County High School surrounded by a sea of blue and the roar of applause and screams. The Meet the 'Neers event was a nice relief from my typical Monday nights plagued by city government meetings and then late nights at the office.

WHITNEY LEGGETT
CV&T News Editor

While I was there, I started to feel so nostalgic and a little sad. As I watched the high school football players prepare for the event I was reminded of Friday night football games in high school. It wasn't until after I had graduated that I realized how much sporting events mean to the average high school student. When I was a freshman, every sporting event I was able to attend meant a Friday night away from mom and dad. This also meant a Friday night spent with my friends. Granted, as a freshman, my night usually ended as soon as the game was over and I walked home.

Living next door to the high school meant easy access to things going on at school when I was too young to drive. As freshmen, my friends and I wanted to do anything we could to be involved and be seen at school. Please don't let me fool you, though. I was not the biggest or most loyal fan in high school. I didn't always realize the value of school sports like I do now. However, being at the event Monday night made me wish I had gone to more. I started thinking about how when I was a sophomore I wasn't as excited to go the games and when I was a junior, I started my first job and it's not easy to make it to games when you work every weekend. I guess, the thing about high school football games is that it's not as much about going to see the game as it is about going to support the classmates you've known since elementary school or to see that boy from your elective class you happen to have a crush on out on the field. The games are also about being with friends and in small towns, games are even about being with family. School sports in small towns, like my hometown and Irvine, are about community as much as they are about competition. I know in my hometown the stadium was always packed. The student section would be going crazy down front and the parents, teachers and other spectators would be cheering from the back of the stands. As a junior I remember coming home from work and being able to hear the cheering at my house. I can picture in my head just what the stadium lights look like from my bedroom window and what it felt like to hear the announcer and the screaming crowd. As a senior, I remember trying to go to as many games as possible. It was as if I now realized if I didn't go now, I would miss my chance. I was right. Senior year ended and I remember feeling like I hadn't done enough to make my high school years worthwhile. I remember wishing I had been more involved, I had worked less and I had spent more Friday nights at games with my best friends. I can't take that back. But I can say that makes me more than excited to be the person responsible for covering high school sports in Estill County.

"Senior year ended...I remember wishing I had been more involved, I had worked less and I had spent more Friday nights at games with my best friends."

I can't wait for fall sport weather and to be in the stands in my new town and cheering on the local teams. I'm eager to bundle up in my first Engineers hoodie, grab my hot cocoa and my camera and make up for all the games I missed in high school. After all, it's the best way to be part of the community in a town like this, right?

I've been made aware a mistake was printed in my column last week. I am told the man who initiated the previous wet/dry vote in Estill County was not Josh Rison, but actually a man named Joey Rison. I got my information from an article written by former staff write Don White in which he incorrectly named the person circulating the petition several years ago. I accessed the article for my column last week and was not aware there was an error. I apologize for any confusion and the error.

American women shine in London Olympic games

The 2012 Summer Olympic Games have come to a close, and what an exciting two weeks it was as Team USA handily won the overall medal count, as well as capturing the most gold medals. But how about those USA women who brought home 29 gold medals? Only two other countries, including male and female competitors, claimed as many—China with 38, and Great Britain with 29. US women won more gold medals than US men, who captured 17, and more overall medals, 58 to 45.

By LISA BICKNELL
CV&T Staff Writer

That's a greater overall medal count than any other country besides China, Russia and Great Britain, again, including those won by both male and female participants. Appropriately enough, these successes come during the summer that marks 40 years since the passage of Title IX, a law that banned sex discrimination in schools, thus requiring equal funding for girl's sports programs. I remember a lot of talk about Title IX in the news when I was a young girl, although I didn't understand what all the fuss was about. What a difference 40 years makes. Today's young girls have the opportunity to play just about any sport they want to from toddlerhood. Many won't ever be aware that a few short decades ago the choices were: cheerleading for girls, basketball and football for boys. At least, that's how it was at my elementary school. American women have certainly taken advantage of new opportunities. Our women dominated in basketball, winning gold for the fifth straight Olympics. Serena Williams crushed her opponent to win gold, dominating another world-class tennis champion so completely that it was almost painful to watch. My favorite sport of the Olympics is probably beach volleyball. Our family likes to play volleyball, and our girls grew up watching Misty May-Treanor and Kerri Walsh, who just won gold in their third Olympics. I don't think I've ever seen anyone work together any better as a team. Who will ever forget the grace and poise of Gabby Douglas, the first black gymnast to win gold as best all-around gymnast? She's sixteen years old. We kind of expect American women to do well in volleyball, basketball and gymnastics, but they captured gold in water polo, judo, boxing, skeet-shooting and soccer as well. In a matter of weeks, some of these young athletes became household names. Briefly, American households were bombarded with images of strong healthy-looking women accomplishing positive things. This was a good year for women in the Olympics overall. For the first time ever, there was no sport off-limits to women, and yep, we won gold in boxing. Even Saudi Arabia sent two women to the games. Maybe they will be inspired by the success of our women and enact some Title IX of their own. Every Games have those moments that bring tears to our eyes and put us in awe of the heart of champions, who obviously aren't all female. Oscar Pistorius, on the South African team, ran in track events with prosthetic legs. Both his legs were amputated between his knees and ankles when he was eleven months old. I think the whole world was rooting for the man also known as the "Blade Runner" or "the fastest man on no legs." Then there was the marathon runner from Australia who was born with a congenital diaphragmatic hernia, a birth defect that my family has become all too familiar with in the past year. These Olympic Games were truly special, I think, and served as proof that champions are champions regardless of gender, race or where they are from.

Irvine officials question Main Street zoning change

When a business opens in the City of Irvine, the owner must acquire a privilege license to operate. Usually an application is made and approved by the city council. A problem arose with one application at Monday's city council meeting when an artist requested a license to open a business in a residential section of Irvine.

Estill highway crew wins overall at Rodeo

It may not have been the Olympics, and the competitors may not have been vying for gold medals, but county pride was on the line as employees from the state highway garages in the Department of Highways District 10 participated in the seventh annual Equipment Rodeo on Wednesday, Aug. 8.

In the end, the competitors from Estill County came away with the bulk of the hardware when scores from the four equipment-operating events were tallied. Estill's team won the overall crew championship, and the county also produced the overall individual winner and one event winner. Estill County's crew broke the four-year winning streak for Magoffin County, which finished second this year.

The Rodeo signals the unofficial beginning of snow and ice removal season for the Department of Highways. This event, held each year in late summer at the district's equipment garage in Beattyville, brings together equipment operators from the district's county garages for a day of friendly competition and fellowship.

This year's District 10 Rodeo allowed equipment operators from the district's county crews to show their skills in operating the equipment they use to maintain state highways in the district. The obstacle courses simulated actual situations equipment operators may encounter in the performance of their duties.

In addition to the traditional snowplow and backhoe events, two new competitions were added this year. Equipment operators had the chance to demonstrate their skills in using a tractor with bushhog and a grader.

Individual event winners were:
•Overall individual, Jason Smith, Estill County.

•Backhoe: Greg Arvin, Estill County, first place; Darrell Rogers, Menifee County, second place.

•Snowplow obstacle course: Pat Graham, Powell County; first place; Jason Smith, Estill County, second place; David Black, Owsley County, third place; Chuck Ward, Magoffin County, fourth place.

•Tractor with bushhog: L.C. Moore, Lee County, first place

•Grader: Kevin McIntosh, Lee County, first place; Jason Smith, Estill County, second place.

The individual winners and runners-up will advance to a statewide competition against participants from the other 11 highway districts across Kentucky, to be held later this month.

ter, takes a lot of skill and knowledge. The Rodeo gives our employees a chance to show off their abilities," said Corbett Caudill, acting chief district engineer. "This event also gives our employees from our county garages, who don't get to have much interaction with other crews on a regular basis, to know that they are all part of one team and that we appreciate all of them for their effort and hard work."

District 10 encompasses the counties of Breathitt, Estill, Lee, Magoffin, Menifee, Morgan, Owsley, Perry, Powell and Wolfe in east-central and southeastern Kentucky.

Award-winning filmmaker, artist, playwright and author, Bill Richardson, will visit the Estill County Public Library, Aug. 24, at 6 p.m., to discuss the most legendary feud in American history - the Hatfields and McCoys. The lecture is free and reservations are encouraged by calling 606-723-3030.

Recognized as a Hatfield McCoy expert, Richardson has appeared in a number of major media productions, including CBS Sunday Morning, American Pickers, How the States Got Their Shapes, the documentaries America's Greatest Feud: The Hatfields and McCoys and Feud: The Hatfields and McCoys. He has lectured at numerous universities, national and international conferences and currently works as an Extension Professor with West Virginia University. He is working to develop a tourism industry based on the history of the Hatfield and McCoy Feud.

Eastern Star has meeting

Irvine Chapter #357, Order Of The Eastern Star, met on Aug. 7, 2012, for their regularly scheduled meeting. There were 18 members present with Worthy Patron Rick Sears presiding. Worthy Matron, Pam Sears, was ill and could not attend the meeting.

The meeting opened with the traditional rituals, the singing of the "Star-Spangled Banner" and "America" and Chaplain Jim Porter led the Chapter in prayer.

During the introduction period, Marsha Porter was recognized as Past Worthy Grand Matron of Kentucky and Bobby Carol Noland was recognized for her many years of dedicated service as Grand Treasurer of Kentucky.

The Chapter collected a large amount of school supplies to be donated to Kathy Bradley and the Family Resource Center at Estill Springs Elementary School.

Worthy Patron Rick Sears reported that both the play and Pantomime show had been a huge success and that another pantomime show is being planned. The money raised will be used to black-top the Lodge Hall parking lot.

The Chapter would like to say a big "thank you" to the Estill County Tribune and the Citizen Voice & Times for the pictures and excellent coverage of the recent play and the pantomime show. All the pictures were put up on the Lodge Hall dining room wall and copies of the newspapers were presented to out of town members.

The Chapter held their annual "Chapter of Sorrow" memorial service in loving memory of members who had passed away during the past year.

Ronnie Richardson was a faithful and dedicated member of both the Masonic Brotherhood and the Order Of The Eastern Star. He left us with the memory of his gentle smile and the kind words that he had for everyone he met. Dorothy Moore had also been a faithful member until advanced age and ill health made it impossible for her to attend meetings. Mildred Hayes, Lauraine Crouch and Tina Thorpe will also be sadly missed.

We would like to express our appreciation to several new members from Perry County (Hazard), who not only travel a long distance but cheerfully work and help the Chapter in any way they can.

The next meeting will be Sept. 4, and all members are urged to attend. New officers will be elected for the coming year at this meeting.

Columnist shares peachy-keen recipes for late summer

By LISA BICKNELL
CV&T Staff Writer

The month of August is serving up lots of green beans and tomatoes from the garden. No matter how we stagger our plantings, they all seem to come in at the same time anyway. Needless to say, it's been a busy week around here.

Few things taste as good fresh as a nice ripe peach, and they are plentiful this time of year too.

I'm not sure how the local peach crop turned out because I don't have a peach tree, but there are plenty of peaches in the stores. They can also be picked up at roadside fruit and vegetable stands.

Sometimes we like to throw together some fresh salsa just to snack on while canning tomatoes.

Here's a basic recipe, but this tomato salsa is also good with a couple of fresh ripe peaches diced and tossed in, or you could even substitute a cup or two of diced watermelon for the peaches. The combination is better than it sounds. I find that the blend of tangy and sweet and spicy all works together really well.

Fresh tomato salsa

2 or three ripe tomatoes
¼ cup chopped onion (Green onions are good, as are red onions, both for flavor and extra color.)
¼ cup chopped cilantro
2 cloves of garlic, minced
1 tsp. minced jalapeno pepper, or more, if you like it hot
1 tbsp olive oil
2 tsp. fresh lime juice (I use lemon juice if I don't have lime.)
Salt and pepper to taste
Cut tomatoes in half and remove the seeds. Dice tomatoes. Mix all ingredients together and allow them to set for a few minutes, if you can wait that long. Serve with tortilla chips and enjoy.

Lately, I've had a favorite peach dessert on my mind, one that's sweet but light and easy as pie to make.

Actually, it is a pie, of sorts. And it's quick and easy. And light. Did I mention that?

Anyway, here goes—something cool and creamy and sweet for the last hot days of summer.

Fresh Peach Dessert

¼ cup milk

½ lb. marshmallows
2 cups graham cracker crumbs
½ cup butter (1 stick), melted
4 or 5 ripe peaches
½ large container Cool Whip
Melt the milk and marshmallows together and set to cool. Mix together the graham crackers, crushed, and the butter. Press into a 9-inch pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 6 to 8 minutes. Cool.

Dice 4 or 5 large peaches and add to ½ container Cool Whip. Mix the Cool Whip and the peaches with the marshmallow mixture. Pour onto the crust and refrigerate. This may be frozen, although I never do.

Life is like a layered cake...

By MEGAN PARKER
CV&T Lifestyle Columnist

For as long as I can remember, I've always carried a book with me. My mom would say that I use to carry every book I owned out the front door with me, even though we were only going to the store and back.

To this, I say that a girls got to be prepared! To this day I carry at least one unread book in my purse and a book in my car. You never know when you are going to get stuck somewhere with nothing to do, so might as well do something constructive with your time.

I love all genres of books. No, I take that back, I can't stand murder/mystery and Stephen King books. They creep me out. I guess you could say I'm a chicken, because I would be checking to make sure my car doors were locked and leave every light in the house on. Books that make me paranoid are out.

Over the weekend I read a book that changed my opinion on a lot of things. The book was "Cake Icing, Butt Budder and Tea Lids". Interesting title that kind of threw me for a loop, but once I started reading the book, I was hooked. The book is written by Renee Andrews who is known for writing women's fiction.

On the second page inside of every book she tells that she is a kidney donor and supports organ donation and that she welcomes prayer requests from anyone who needs it. That's all it took for me to choose this one.

Around here, we live in the bible belt and asking someone to pray for you is as natural as taking a breath, but a lot of folks don't have the love of God like we do here in the south.

They don't know how to pray, or that amazing feeling that comes over you when you become a child of God. It's sad, but it's true.

Throughout the course of the story, the character (a young southern girl) shares moments of her life that change her, help her to become the woman she is to be and of her mother and aunt who help guide her down her path. They use love, laughter and good old southern comfort food as a staple in everyday life.

Her mama describes life to her as a layered cake (Cake Icing). That each person's cake is unique but it takes all kinds of different flavors to make the person and a lot of thick butter cream icing as a good strong foundation.

Her aunt tells her that you should always be prepared for whatever life throws you (Butt Budder - which is kind of like how we use Vasoline and Vick's Salve or Carmex for everything, i.e. chapped lips, cracked feet, chent cold, runny nose - you get the picture)

And then a stranger helps her to learn that the hard lessons in life hit you right out of nowhere (Tea Lids) like when someone you love gets cancer and you do your best to make each and every day special for that person.

I laughed so hard that I cried, and then I cried so hard that I laughed. It was a funny, yet touching tale of life, and one that I think every woman should read.

If you think about it, our lives are like a big layered cake. Each chapter of our lives create a new layer, and when we think our cake is getting a bit weak, we spread our butter cream icing on real thick to help prepare us, strengthen us for life's battles.

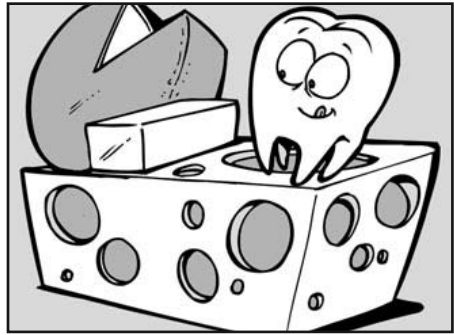

I've got a tube of Carmex in my purse and some Vick's Salve in the medicine cabinet, because you should always be prepared. You never know when your going to need them.

And those tea lids that accumulate like random facts of life, help to build our character and make sure that we enjoy the small, simple moments of life.

I guess I could say I'm a lot like the title of that book. My life has been full of "Cake Icing, Butt Budder and Tea Lids". God bless.

On a special note, I'd like to thank my first grade teacher, Kathy Moore, who really helped encourage my love of books. Thank you Ms. Moore for reading us the Ramona books. They still make me laugh and think of you to this day!

FOOD FOR THE SOUL

Jeremiah 6:16

*Thus saith the LORD, Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls. But they said,
We will not walk therein.*

Thoughts on this verse... Temptation is a choice between God's will for us -- the old path -- and a shortcut provided by Satan -- the new path. So often, Satan's path is presented to us as a shortcut to happiness, prosperity, and accomplishment. However, this path leads us away from God and the blessings he longs to give us. Let's not be like the people of God in Jeremiah's day who refused God's way and said,"We will not walk in it." The outcome of their choice was their own destruction.

ENCOURAGING WORD: A CHEERFUL HEART IS GOOD MEDICINE

Howard Coop
Guest Columnist

almost everything is strangely different.
In June of 1982, it became necessary for us to move. After four pleasant years in an industrialized urban community with a population of just over thirty thousand, we moved to a small county seat town with a population of just over four thousand. It was in the center of a coal-mining region, and everything was different. All kinds of adjustments had to be made.

Moving from one community to another is seldom easy. Usually, it involves a certain amount of stress. The necessity to pack and unpack everything disturbs the daily routine of life for several weeks, and many moves involve going from a familiar community to an unfamiliar community and adjusting to a new environment in which

After a few weeks in that new community, I developed a problem and some obvious symptoms appeared. I made an appointment with a physician, and I saw him immediately. Soon after beginning an examination, he looked at me and said,
“Your blood pressure is out of control.”
The diastolic reading was higher than the systolic reading should have been. The doctor game me some medicine, told me to take it, rest as much as possible and come back in a week. When I went back, the medicine had not worked; my blood pressure was worse. After thinking about it for a moment, the doctor said,
“This time I’m going to give you some good medicine. Take it, and see what happens.”
I did, it worked, and I have been taking that medicine for thirty years with good results.
It is a fact of life:
Some medicines are good, but others are better. There is a good medicine, maybe one of the best that has been around for a long time. Not thirty years ago but thirty hundred years ago, it was well known and recommended. As far back as three millennia, it had become proverbial that “A cheerful heart is good medicine.”
